and sound effects. In addition, you can adjust the volume and tempo, as well as change the key and e-mail your song. But you can also use an eraser to quickly undo your mistakes. The program takes up a moderate-to-high amount of system resources and includes a well-drawn help file with snapshots.

Unfortunately, the free version of the app doesn't allow you to add new loops (bass, orchestral, keyboard, drum, guitar, vocal, effects, horn, percussion). Also, you cannot start a new song from scratch (but you can use the erase tool to remove everything from the demo song) or make recordings. Saving mode is disabled, technically. However, if you press the "E-mail Song" button, the tool allows you to save music in the WMA format. The bottom line is that Super Duper Music Looper XPress is an excellent, simple-to-use program for teaching children and adults alike the basics behind music creating and editing. Too bad the free version doesn't give you too many options. Otherwise, we strongly recommend it to all users.

If you like to be amazed at what is possible with games from the 1990s, this is a good sample of what you may be missing out on. Pix'N Love was recently released by Big Fish Games and it's created by local developers, Liscor Games, of the pokemon franchise fame. The game is based on the '90s hit show of the same name. As far as the graphics go, they're pretty sweet. The game features hand drawn cartoon art. The graphics is a nice change from some of the pixelating games you're probably used to seeing these days. The game is also full of nostalgia, which makes it even more fun for me as a fan of the show. As far as the gameplay goes, Pix'N Love is a single player RPG game. You play as a boy named Lucas in a school named L
